Africa is a huge and diverse continent that cannot be described with a single and unique narrative, as the gap between the richest countries and the poorest is substantial. Despite the differences, there are also common concerns. In this context, intra-African free trade is seen as the best first step in breaking the cycle of underdevelopment that is denying opportunities for African workers and businesses. The removal of customs and other barriers will encourage constructive interaction and peaceful cooperation.

The African Continental Free Trade Agreement (AFCFTA), which was signed by 54 African countries, is set to become the world’s largest free trade area, with a single market that straddles economies with a combined GDP of $3 trillion. However, from global trade wars to poor infrastructure, Africa’s economy is struggling to keep its pace. Investors must see themselves as stakeholders in Africa, just as Africa must grasp the opportunity to become stakeholders in the global economy.

This new edition of the New Africa Business Development Forum aims to provide a platform for Business and economic cooperation, for informative and interactive sessions with the prime movers of infrastructure sector across various spheres like government, policy-makers, industry leaders, academia and future investors, to explore new potential areas for financial assistance, as well as access to finance to the infrastructure players.
By 2050, the world will be home to 10 billion people, and two in five of these people will be aged 60 or over, including 434 million over 80 years old. This combination of population growth and demographic ageing changes will seriously accelerate the challenges we face for the delivery of health and healthcare, with global healthcare spend projected to reach 13% of GDP in OECD countries by 2050.

The Mediterranean region has been one of the hardest hit by the COVID-19 pandemic. The region’s health systems have proven to be insufficiently prepared. After the most intense months of the emergency, health systems are beginning to recover, but with significant consequences. Countries in Europe and the Mediterranean face several common health challenges like building sustainable and resilient health systems. With so many types of innovations available, the Mediterranean economies have an opportunity to bypass development stages that were previously unavoidable and sidestep the pitfalls of entrenched systems.

This pioneer event sits at the heart of the Mediterranean healthcare scene. The Mediterranean Healthcare Forum brings together some of the most influential public and business leaders in Europe, the Mediterranean and Africa for one-day of growth, knowledge sharing, networking. If you are interested in the latest developments and want to get involved in the future of healthcare, this is the conference to join to become a part of the discussion. Our forum will be the driving force towards understanding healthcare investment, health tech, the insurance industry, and much more.
Agro-food industry is one of the key pillars of the economy and human subsistence as it represents the 3% of world GDP and almost 30% of global employment. Has we have seen in the past the agricultural markets are unstable, reacting to speculative forecasts by operators, with price variations. Strong price increases trigger riots and riots among consumers and high income instability for producers, mainly SMEs and family farms.

In 2020, this situation has been complicated due to the closure of borders to contain the COVID-19. Food insecurity, which already affects almost 40% of the world’s population, can increase exponentially without the proper functioning of supply chains and public health, while in 2019, global agricultural start-ups invested nearly $ 20 billion in food tech solution. In the Mediterranean, the challenge is to promote modern, competitive, global and resource-sustainable agriculture in order to increase the attractiveness of the sector and offer employment opportunities.

Heritage diets, such as the Mediterranean Diet, must form the basis for the construction of regional food systems, based on proximity, solidarity and autonomy, and therefore, more resistant to economic and social, health or climate crises. It is urgent to promote measures to reactivate the agro-food sector and avoid its suffocation, but it is also imperative to lay the foundations for a new model of sustainable development.
The 2021 MedaWomen edition is designed to accelerate the growth of women-owned businesses and start-ups in the Mediterranean region through access to information, contacts and capital. It is suitable for anyone in any stage of business: for those who just got started and also for those who have already been in business for decades.

The empowerment and representation of women in decision-making spheres, as well as the improvements on the social, economic, and health conditions, are essential for the achievement of a sustainable development for all. In this forum we will work together to highlight the essential role of educating women to leverage their position in managerial roles, at all levels and in aspects of life. We will facilitate connections, provide innovatively solutions and be a source for growth.

The Mediterranean Forum For Women Entrepreneurs spurring action to support women entrepreneurs in the Mediterranean, Middle East and North Africa. Global women leaders, private and public sector partner, and entrepreneurs from around the region will discuss the steps to lower policy and regulatory barriers, how to accelerate the access to capital, and provide mentoring and networking opportunities for the women attending this forum.
MEDITERANEAN SOCIAL ECONOMY FORUM
Building Stronger Ties through Social Economy

The Social Economy is a vibrant sector of the economy and fosters sustainable and inclusive societies, along with jobs and growth, but it needs adapted and supportive ecosystems to thrive. In the European Union, it generates 8% of GDP, and represents 10% of all companies. In the countries bordering the Mediterranean, it has a socio-economic impact on more than 3.2 million social economy companies that generate 15 million jobs.

The Mediterranean faces a serious demographic challenge and needs to create six times more jobs than the currently available. With a rampant youth unemployment of 35% and 45% for women, the situation is quite dangerous in some countries. Serious and coordinated action is needed to provide alternatives to accommodate the enormous energy of youth and women, options that improve their representation within the government of organizations, and use that energy for economic and social reconstruction.

The consequences of COVID-19 have made it clear that, in addition to demanding universal health systems, it is essential to rethink the social networks that connect us local, national and internationally. The key is to recognise the added value of Social Economy organisations. This approach must be part of a new model of economic development that also encompasses a Digital, Green and Blue revolution to achieve an egalitarian and inclusive system that could meet social expectations and reduce the injustice and inequality gap. Social Economy is presented as a plausible route to recovering and developing dignified jobs that respond comprehensively to the current crisis.

#MedaWeek21
Islamic finance primary objective is the promotion of economic prosperity and human welfare based on total sharia-compliant assets and has it has been seen in its evolution it may play a vital role for further economic development and prosperity for the Mediterranean and African region. Although the Islamic finance industry slowed down significantly in 2020 after experiencing a very strong 13% growth rate in 2019, total assets stood at $2.88 trillion by the end of 2020, a substantial growth is expected to bounce back as it is predicted to reach $3.69 trillion by 2024.

The 6th Mediterranean Islamic Finance Forum will examine the Islamic Finance in the post COVID-19 scenario. More specifically, how Islamic finance can be a part of the COVID-19 response and become more closely interlinked, and how Shariah compliant financial institutions and asset managers can play a greater role towards the achievement of Sustainable Development Goals, including the alleviation of disease and reduction of global displacement. This Forum will also discuss the growth of Islamic fintech start-ups now offer digital mortgage platforms, wealth management mobile applications and sharia-compliant crypto-currency exchanges.

The Mediterranean Islamic Finance Forum, which is the only gathering of this kind in the Mediterranean region, will offer a unique networking opportunity for regulators, industry practitioners, business leaders and Shariah scholars to share their views and experiences, create opportunities and strengthen this industry.
The Mediterranean Hotel & Hospitality Forum is renowned for attracting the highest calibre international hospitality representatives and companies of any event in Mediterranean. This forum connects business leaders from the international and Mediterranean markets to drive cooperation and catalyse investment into tourism projects, infrastructure and hotel development across Mediterranean.

The hotel industry has been severely affected by the COVID-19 pandemic due to the cancellation of reservations and events and the restrictions imposed on travel. The Mediterranean region has 20% of the hotel accommodation capacity worldwide. The 24 Mediterranean countries have 10,000 destinations, about 100,000 hotels and a million restaurants. The vulnerabilities exposed by the pandemic, such as the oversupply of hotel capacity, bureaucracy, the lack of flexibility and innovation and the inadequate collaboration between all the actors involved, present an opportunity to reinvent the sector.

The most important goal is to create a more resilient and sustainable hotel industry that is capable of withstanding future major crises. The Mediterranean Hotel & Hospitality Forum has an extensive programme offering the latest insight and market intelligence, highlight solutions and initiatives already available, as well as discussing innovations that will drive the sector forward. It is the must-attend event for those looking to develop green hotel policies, projects and technologies or looking to make their existing operations more sustainable.
The COVID-19 outbreak and the containment measures have led to the closure of cinema theatres, the standstill of productions and the cancellation of festivals and markets. The impact on the economy and employment has been very severe and has affected the entire value chain of the audiovisual industry.

The audiovisual sector is key for the promotion of cultural diversity at local and international levels. Mediterranean audiovisual products currently suffer from a chronic lack of media coverage, with the general public of course, but above all with the professional public that could buy, distribute, broadcast and co-produce the programmes and films.

The aim of this forum is to support the sector, engaging all stakeholders in a new successful strategy that brings together the main Euro-Mediterranean radio and television stations, audiovisual and cultural operators, and institutional representatives of the region.
MedaWeek Barcelona Talks offer the possibility to openly exchange different points of view over top-trending topics concerning the Mediterranean region.

- Mediterranean Sport Industry Conference
  Sport is a powerful force for cooperation and peace. The goal of this conference is to make of sport a new growth niche through investments in infrastructure, while creating jobs for young people and business opportunities.

- Mediterranean Cruise Industry Conference
  The cruise industry represents has experienced the greatest growth in recent years in the Mediterranean. It earns 45 billion euros per year for the Mediterranean economy and guarantees 320,000 jobs. However, the industry is now suffering enormously from the negative economic repercussions of the COVID-19 pandemic.
